Bars and Customers are interested in Tab Management

Likely or very likely used by 80%+ of customers. 40%-50% say it would affect bar choice.

Online Survey

Bartenders spend too much time checking and updating tabs

People worry about their tabs

Customers often don't know what they want

You can influence which drinks customers buy

Some customers get what the bar is known for, some what their friends order

Affecting Drink Choice is Valuable for Distributors & Manufacturers

Marketing company pushing drinks at bars in Las Vegas

$3B/year on Liquor Advertising!*

Want to finish kegs

Lots of sales representatives from drink companies

Drink Choice is Valuable for Distributors & Manufacturers

Drink companies are willing to pay money to push certain drinks!

Marketing company pushing drinks at bars, clubs, Veggies, drink companies want influence

Want to finish kegs

Lots of sales representatives from drink companies

Cocktail Creation is a Non-starter

Bars are optimized for their core set of cocktails, outside that, it takes longer and they're less good.

People don't know how to make good cocktails

Bartenders take pride in their work

Social Happens Elsewhere

Best solved by integration!

Tab management and drinks
recommendations should be popular,
and there is money in both...

Why hasn't it happened yet?
(Market Penetration: ~2%*)

Bars do not want to change their workflow

Barcodes or extra devices are a bad idea

SOMAR

If it adds even the smallest bit of overhead, we would not use it

Even when available, Customers don't always use it

Adopted a tab management app and nobody cared (don't know why, it makes sense!)

Getting Bars to pay can be a significant sales effort

Cost of acquiring a bar is $1,500-$2,500

We don't do Happy Hours, it cuts into profits and margins are not that high.

PART III: Opportunities & Existing Companies

Many Companies Are Trying

“We get someone pitching something like this every three months”

An Emerging Market

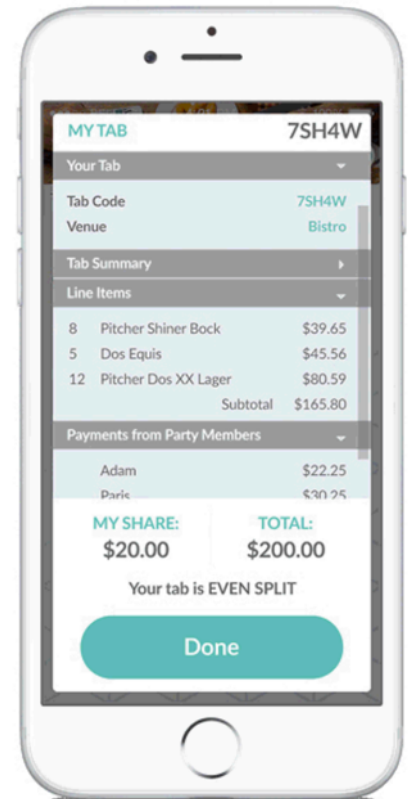

Many Have Failed...

Most Successful: Tabbed Out

- Established 2009 (Austin, TX)
- $41M funding (Dec 15: $23.5M Series C), claim 10,000+ bars, bars pay for service/analytics*

Never heard about it!
(it's hidden in POS)

What Makes the Difference Between Success and Failure?

1. Minimizing Friction for Bar Adoption
2. Achieving Sufficient Concentration for Customer Adoption
3. A good Business Model: Who pays?

I: Bar Adoption

Insight: Must not interfere with bar's workflow → Need POS Integration

Integration

2: Customer Adoption

Insight: Can get early adopters from local events & bar concentrations

τabbedout

3: Who Pays For it?

Insight: Bars and Customers won't Pay!

- Drink manufacturers?
- Distributors?
- Data aggregators ($1.72/user/quarter*)

We have all the data we need

Profit margins are not that high

Tabbedout[®]

1. Friction: POS Integration ✓
2. Concentration: Launch at SXSW ✓
3. Who pays?: Bar Pays for Data ✗

Can compete by making it free!

Key Opportunities

- Few competitors, no market dominance
- Best chance to compete?
 - Free tab app for bars and customers
 - Minimize barrier for customer adoption (e.g., stay local, no app setup necessary)
 - Revenue from secondary features (drink recommendations, advertising, social, data)

SUMMARY

Summary

- Mobile apps for enhancing the bar experience are a substantial opportunity
- Difficult to “crack” the market; many have tried, many have failed
- Tab management as feature to get people to use it, then add secondary features
- Focus on friction for bars, adoption for customers and business model
